MARYLAND HISTORICAL TRUST
INTERNAL NR-ELIGIBILITY REVIEW FORM

Property/District Name: Mt. Pleasant Survey District Survey Number: F - 8-129

Project: MD 26 from Crum Road to Chestnut Grove Road Agency: FHWA/SHA

Site visit by MHT Staff: X no      yes Name                      Date

Criteria: X A      B X C      D Considerations:      A      B      C      D      E      F      G      None

Justification for decision: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map)

Based on the available information, we believe the district is eligible under Criteria A, for transportation, and C, for architecture. Mt. Pleasant is a well-preserved linear village of the second half of the 19th century and early 20th century which developed as a result of the Liberty-Frederick Turnpike and the subsequent tie-in traffic from subordinate roads to Walkersville and Annapolis. Well into the 20th century, Mt. Pleasant served as an important center for the surrounding farms, where goods could be purchased and produce shipped to Frederick and Baltimore. The original layout of the roads remains intact, with the former turnpike, now MD 26, still the most important feature of the town. Though established in the 19th century, the town consisted of less than 20 buildings until the beginning of the 20th century and the rise of the automobile as the standard transportation method. Architecturally, the town has a good variety of vernacular dwellings dating from the 1850s to the 1930s. Sixty two of the approximately 70 buildings in the district are judged to be contributing. The boundaries for the historic district have yet to be determined.

Documentation on the property/district is presented in: Project File and Maryland Inventory form F-8-129

Mt. Pleasant Survey District

Mt. Pleasant, Maryland

Private

Mt. Pleasant is a turnpike-related town of the 1850's which developed at the Liberty and Frederick Turnpike intersections with secondary roads to Walkersville and Annapolis. The survey district contains about 70 structures, of which 62 are contributing. They are primarily two-story frame vernacular dwellings of the late 19th century, with two excellent Gothic Revival houses of the 1880's. Two brick commercial structures of the 1850's and 1880's are small, one-story buildings, with distinctive facades of three bays and center entries. Now dominated by a 1950's grain elevator, Mt. Pleasant remains focused on the former turnpike route, Maryland Route 26, on which most of the buildings face.

7.1 Description

Mt. Pleasant is a small town established in the third quarter of the 19th century on the Liberty-Frederick Turnpike, now Liberty Road (Maryland Route 26) about half-way between Frederick and Libertytown. Roads joining the turnpike from Walkersville to the north, now Crum Road, and one branching off toward Annapolis, now Kelly Road, provided a focus of traffic which gave rise to the linear nature of Mt. Pleasant, essentially a single row of structures on the north and south sides of Liberty Road, with a similar layout along Kelly Road. The density of the structures is more pronounced near the Kelly Road intersection and more scattered at the east and west ends of the district. The existing resources are primarily vernacular residential structures of the period 1850-1940, with two 1870's churches, two commercial buildings of the last quarter of the 19th century and two built in the first quarter of the 20th, a 1930's restaurant, and, among the 15 non-contributing structures, a 1950's grain elevator, a 1970's convenience store, a 1980's bakery, a 1960's taxidermy shop attached to a 1930's bungalow, a modern marble/cabinetry shop, and two plumbing contractors. The district also includes a small contributing farmstead at its east end with an 1870's dwelling and four agricultural outbuildings. Most of the residential buildings are frame, with some log sections possible in the structure of rear wings and outbuildings. Most are covered with modern artificial siding, although one dwelling is stone and two are brick. Two of the houses are good examples of the vernacular Gothic Revival style, with elaborate rustication, and scroll sawn decorative trim. One of the commercial buildings of the 1880's, at 9622 Liberty Road, is a shed-roofed one-story structure connected by a brick hyphen to a brick residence. The 1850's brick store, now a garage, to 9535 Liberty Road, is the oldest identified commercial structure in the district. It also serves as the post office. Along Kelly Road east of Pleasant Oak Road are several small residential buildings erected in the period 1925-1950. They are generally one or two story frame buildings with the general form of an early ranch house type or are derivatives of the bungalow type.

The general level of integrity in the district is good; in spite of increasing traffic on Route 26, the town remains visually a small crossroads village with a moderate number of intrusions.

Eight buildings in Mt. Pleasant were added to the Inventory in the late 1970s. They are:

- F-8-10 Mt. Pleasant United Methodist Church
- F-8-11 Jacob Diller House, 9604 Liberty Road
- F-8-12 George Stevens House, 9625 Liberty Road
- F-8-13 Mt. Pleasant German Reformed Church
- F-8-16 Pearl House, 9535 Liberty Road
- F-8-17 Calvin Thomas Store, garage at 9535 Liberty Road
- F-8-18 William McDonnell House, 9536 Liberty Road
- F-8-19 Willa Nusbaum House, 9646 Liberty Road

7.2 Description

All remain in a good state of integrity, except the Calvin Thomas Store. The south wall of this building and most interior finish has been almost entirely removed for the building's present use as a garage. The north elevation facing Rt. 26 remains generally intact. This was also the post office in the 19th century. The Pearl House and the George Stevens House are the two best domestic architectural examples in the district, having elaborately decorated porch and gable trim and at the Stevens House, rusticated siding and a carriage house with double cupolas. The Nusbaum House now has vinyl siding. The William McDonnell House is a good example of the cross-gable, five-bay vernacular dwelling of the last quarter of the 19th century. The Jacob Diller House is only slightly less significant as a similar representative, having artificial siding. The two churches remain in essentially the same condition as 1979, with the previously recorded additions on the rear elevations and minor alterations due to maintenance.

The following are brief descriptions of the additional principal buildings:

9833 Liberty Road: A two-story circa 1870 frame dwelling with german siding and a three-bay north elevation with a one-story porch. Interior end chimneys and 2/2 windows. Three or four frame outbuildings arranged on a north-south axis south of the house may be of the same date. A typical representative of the Mt. Pleasant dwelling, although most have artificial siding.

9806 Liberty Road: A two-story circa 1870 brick dwelling with three bays and a one-story porch. A two-story, german-sided extension on the north elevation and a frame smokehouse just northeast of the house. Two other frame outbuildings. The house has 5-course American bond, flat arches, and louvred shutters.

Avalon Restaurant, Liberty Road at Dance Hall Road: Site of Public School No. 47, in the 1850's later Public School No. 3 built in 1890 and demolished in the early 1930's. The one-story brick restaurant was erected about 1936, re-using some brick and possibly a few window frames of the demolished school. The rectangular building retains the inscription stone of the school near its northwest corner: "Mt. Pleasant Public School No. 3, Election District No. 13, 1890."

Raymond Barnes House: A circa 1875 two-story, five-bay frame house with cross gable and pointed arch gable window. Segmental arched 1/1 windows. German siding and a one-story bracketed porch. The rear ell has a two story porch on the west elevation.

9622 Liberty Road: A circa 1870, brick four-bay dwelling with a brick hyphen linking a one-story brick commercial building to the west side. The dwelling house has a standing seam gable roof, and interior end chimneys. Two entrances in the south elevation reduced to one by infill in west doorway. Window hoods with brackets. The commercial building has a shed roof sloped to the north,

7.3 Description

three bays and a one-story porch. Perforated vent panels above the porch roof and a bracketed dentil cornice, 1/1 sash. This structure is unique in Mt. Pleasant, the best example of late 19th century commercial architecture.

9545 Liberty Road: A one-story, concrete block commercial building with a stepped gable facade. Built about 1940, it has a one-story porch, probably added in the 1950's or 1960's. A center entrance is flanked by 8-light industrial metal sash. Corrugated metal gable roof.

9714 Liberty Road: The only stone building in the district, the two-story house has a three-bay original section adjoined by a two-bay frame section on the east. Possibly built about 1850, the interior chimney was originally on the east gable end. A one-story porch extends across most of the south elevation. Composition roof, and shutters at the 1/1 windows. The frame section has asbestos shingle siding.

Farmstead at east end of district: This small agricultural grouping consists of a circa 1870 frame house with vinyl siding and four agricultural outbuildings. The concrete block dairy barn was probably built about 1940. A brick silo near its west end probably pre-dates the dairy barn by 60 years. A second smaller frame barn has metal siding and a standing seam roof. A frame corncrib/wagon shed of about 1890 is located near the house.

9701 Liberty Road: The circa 1880 frame house with vinyl siding is less notable than the log structures to the rear of the dwelling. This was an architectural antiques store until recently sold. The principal business is now furniture refinishing, but many of the antiques and architectural artifacts remain on the site. The log structures are outbuildings which have been moved to the site. On the west side of Dance Hall Road is an additional storage lot for artifacts.

Middle Plantation Inn; 9549 Liberty Road: The one-story stone building with log wings on each side is a 1980's building using salvaged materials from other buildings. It is a non-contributing structure in the survey district because of recent date.

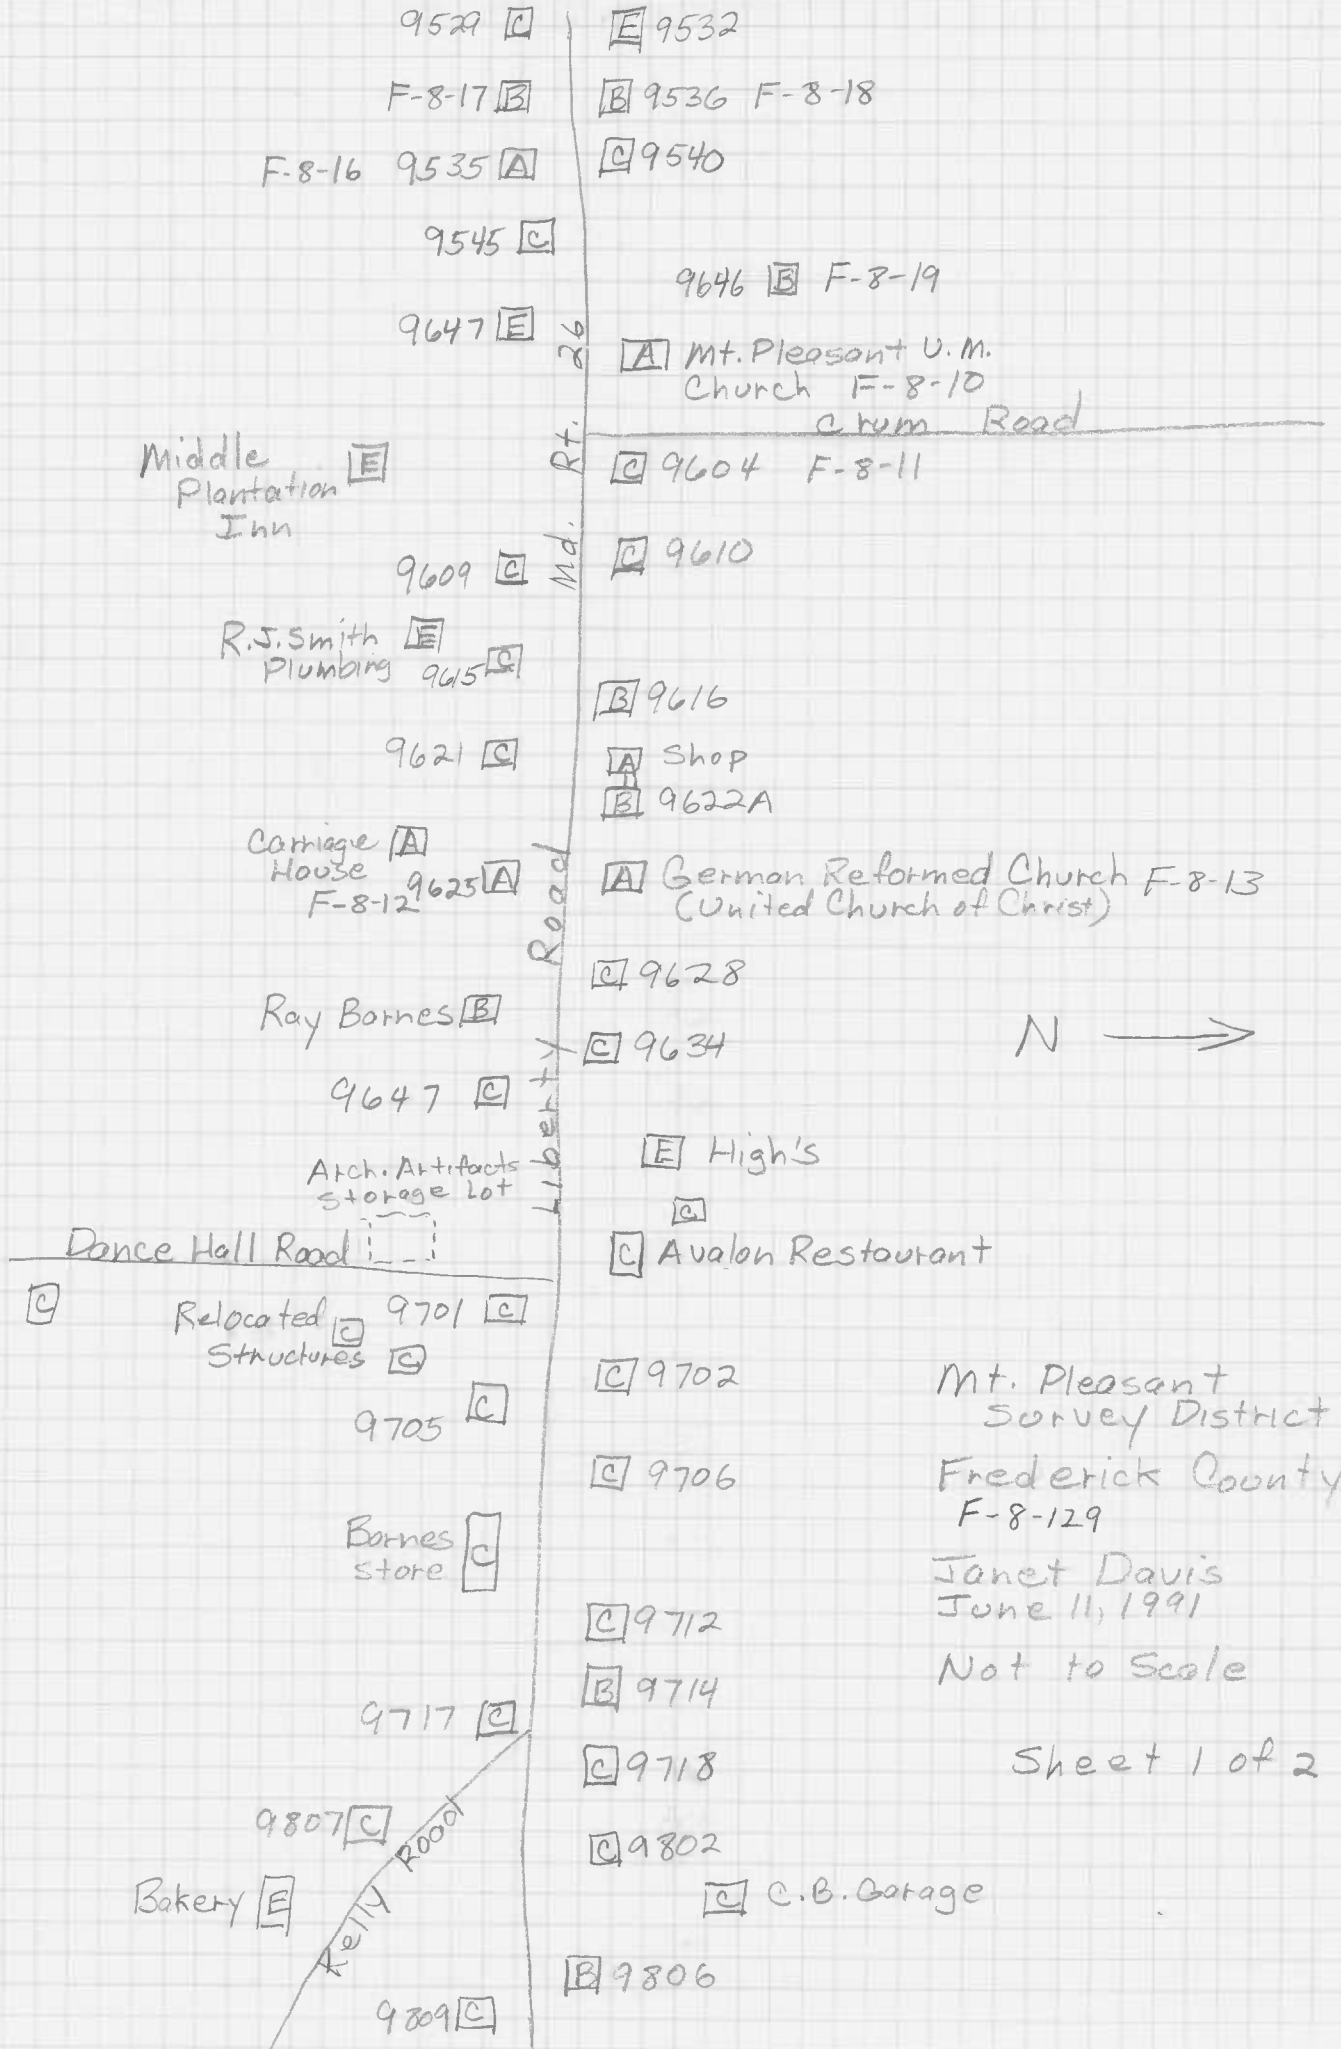

Other Non-contributing buildings: The grain elevator on Kelly Road is the most visible structure in Mt. Pleasant due to its height and distinctive circular tanks. It was erected beginning in the 1950's. Other non-contributing buildings include the A&S Marble and Granite Sales at 9834 Liberty, a 1970's sales and workshop, and R.J. Smith Plumbing at 9615 Liberty, a two-story concrete block structure.

8.1 Significance

Mt. Pleasant is a well-preserved small town of the second half of the 19th century which developed as a result of the Liberty-Frederick Turnpike and the subsequent tie-in traffic from subordinate roads to Walkersville and Annapolis. The original layout of the roads remains intact, with the former turnpike, now a state highway route, still the most important feature of the town. Architecturally, the town has a good variety of vernacular dwellings dating from the 1850's to the 1930's, and two excellent commercial buildings the 1850's and 1880's. The most prominent dwellings, the Pearl House (F-8-16) and the George Stevens House (F-8-12) are fine examples of the Gothic Revival style. The town's layout is distinctively linear, the result of the widely spaced pattern of intersections and the dominance of the turnpike in the life of the town.

A similar development of a small town may be seen in Johnsville. Here as in Mt. Pleasant, the town is lined along both sides of a major route between larger towns at the intersection of subsidiary roads. These two towns are clearly different in origin from the grid-planned towns of Woodsboro and Libertytown. Johnsville and Mt. Pleasant share similarities in architecture in that the peak of development was reached in the third and fourth quarters of the 19th century, with the result that most of their remaining resources are from this period. Development tended to be gradual and leveled off in the first decade of the 20th century.

The 1858 Isaac Bond map shows two groups of buildings, one near the present Kelly Road intersection and one located west of the present Crum Road. This map is a strong indicator of the road-related nature of Mt. Pleasant's growth. By 1873, the two groups were virtually indistinguishable and the two 1870's churches and the school were prominently noted on the C.O. Titus map. The town was well-established by that year, but the number of total buildings remained less than 20 until the beginning of the 20th century and the rise of the automobile as the standard transportation method. Mt. Pleasant continued to be an important center for the surrounding farms, where goods could be purchased and produce shipped to Frederick and Baltimore.
